

How we are responding to COVID-19

In the wake of the COVID-19 virus, our highest priority is to do our part to help ensure the health and safety of our employees, customers, and suppliers while meeting our service commitments.

Wineshipping continues to closely follow the COVID-19 outbreak and has a plan in place to protect the well-being of the Wineshipping team, as well as managing business continuity and communication with our clients. Wineshipping's operations team is monitoring, daily, our transportation and other vendor partners' operations, local health department updates in each of our locations, as well as the CDC and national updates to modify our response as necessary.

We are currently operating at normal levels. The impact to our shipping partners and suppliers has been minimal. This could change quickly as the situation continues to evolve.

Wineshipping's plan will modify as events unfold and be updated to reflect changes based on the possible scenarios at each of our locations in accordance with the local health department and CDC. Our social responsibility is to protect our staff and community.

During these extraordinary circumstances, my gratitude goes first and foremost to Wineshipping's women and men who, with their tremendous commitment over the past few days, have demonstrated the passion and dedication that defines our business. It is out of our respect for them, for their peace of mind, and those of their families, that we will continue to closely monitor the changing situation and adjust our response accordingly.

Changes to our operational capacity, as a result of COVID-19, will be promptly communicated to our customers.

Sincerely,

Eric Lewis | CEO
